SPECIAL MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT The subjoined message from the President of the United States was transmit ted to both houses of Congress on Thurs-TO THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF REP-

RESENTATIVES : - Circumstances have occurred to disturb the course of governmental organization in the Territory of Kansas, and produce there is condition of things which renders it incumbent on me to call your attention to the subject, and urgently to recommend the adoption by you of such measures of legislation as the grave exigencies of the case appear

A brief exposition of the circumstan referred to, and of their causes, will necessary to the full understanding the recommendations which it is proposed to submit.

The act to organize the Territories of Nebraska and Kansas was a manifesta-tion of the legislative opinion of Congress on two great points of constitutional construction t one, that the designation of the boundaries of a new Territory, and provision for its political organization and administration as a Territory, are measures which of right fall within the powers of the general government; and the other, that the inhabitants of any such Territory considered as an inchoate State are entitled, in the exercise of selfgovernment, to determine for themselves what shall be their own domestic institutions, subject only to the constitution and the laws duly enacted by Congress under it, and to the power of the existing States to decide according to the provisions and principles of the constitution at what time the Territory shall be received as a State into the Union. Such are the great political rights which are solemnly declared and affirmed by that act.

Based upon this theory, the act of Congress defined for each Territory the outlines of republican government, distributing public authority among law fully-created agents-executive, judicial, and legislative-to be appointed either by the general government or by the Territory. The legislative functions were intrusted to a council and a house of representatives duly elected and em powered to enact all the local laws which they might deem essential to their prosperity, happiness, and good government. Acting in the same spirit, Congress also defined the persons who were in the first instance to be considered as the people of each Territory; enacting that every free white male inhabitant of the same above the age of twenty-one years, being an actual resident thereof, and possessing the qualifications hereafter described should be entitled to vote at the first election, and be eligible to any office within the Territory; but that the quali-fications of voters and holding office at all subsequent elections should be such as might be prescribed by the legislative assembly: Provided, however, that the right of suffrage and of holding office should be exercised only by citizens of the United States, and those who should have declared on oath their intention to become such, and have taken an oath to support the constitution of the United States and the provisions of the act .-And provided, further, that no officer, soldier, seaman, or marine, or other person in the army or navy of the United States, or attached to troops in their service, should be allowed to vote or hold in either Territory by reason of being on service therein. Such of the public officers of the Territories as, by the provisions of the act, were to be appointed by the general government, including the governors, were appointed and commissioned in due season, the law having been enacted on the 30th of May, 1854, and the commission of the governor of the Territory of Nebraska being dated on the 2d day of August, 1854, and of the Territory of Kansas on the 29th day of June, 1854.

Among the duties imposed by the act on the governors was that of directing and superintending the political organi zation of the respective Territories. The governor of Kansas was required to cause a census or enumeration of the inhabi tants and qualified voters of the several counties and districts of the Territoy to be taken by such persons and in such mode as he might designate and appoint; to appoint and direct the time and places of holding the first elections, and the manner of conducting them, both as to the persons to superintend such elections and the returns thereof; to declare the number of the members of the council and house of representatives for each county or district; to declare what persons might appear to be duly elected : and to appoint the time and place of the first meeting of the legislative assembly. In substance, the same duties were devolved on the governor of Nebraska.

While, by this act, the principle of constitution for each of the Territories was one and the same, and the details of organic legislation regarding both were as nearly as could be identical, and while the Tetritory of Nebraska was tranquil-ly and successfully organized in the due course of law, and its first legislative assembly met on the 16th of January, 1855, the organization of Kansas was long delayed, and has been attended with serious difficulties and embarrassments, partly the consequence of local mal-administration, and partly of the unjustifiable linterference of the inhabitants of some of the States foreign by residence, interests, and rights to the Territory.

The governor of the Territory of Kansas, commissioned, as before stated, on the 29th of June, 1854, did not reach the designated seat of his government until the 7th of the ensuing October; and even then failed to make the first step in its legal organization—that of ordering the census or enumeration of its inhabitants-until so late a day that the election of the members of the legislative control of the second control of the second of the second assembly did not take place until the 30th of March, 1855, nor its meeting until the second of July, 1855. So that for a year after the Territory was constituted by the act of Congress, and the officers to be appointed by the federal Executive had been commissioned, it was without a complete government, without any legislative authority, without local law, and of course without the ordinary guarantees of peace and public order.

In other respects, the givernor, in-stead of exercising constant vigilance, and putting form all his energies to e tendencies to e to exist in all tion to be diverted from official obligation by other objects, and himself set an example of the violation of law, in the performance of acts which rendered it my duty, in the sequel, to remove him from the office of chief executive magistrate of the Territory. Before the requisite preparation was accomplished for election of a territorial legislature, an election of delegates to Congress had been held in the Territory on the 29th day of November, 1854, and the delegate took his seat in the House of Representatives without challenge .-If arrangements had been perfected by the governor, so that the election for members of the legislative assembly might be held in the several precincts at the same time as for delegate to Congress, any question appertaining to the qualification of persons voting as people of the Territory, would have passed necessarily and at once under the supervision of Congress, as the judge of the validity of the return of the delegate, and would have been determined before conflicting passions had become inflamed by time and before opportunity could have been afforded for systematic interference of the people of individual States.

This interference, in so far as concerns its primary causes and its immediate commencement, was one of the incidents of that pernicious agitation on the subject of the condition of the colored persons held to service in some of the States. which has so long disturbed the repose of our country, and excited individuals. otherwise patriotic and law-abiding, to toil with misdirected zeal in the attempt to propagate their social theories by the perversion and abuse of the powers of Congress. The persons and the parties whom the tenor of the act to organize the Territories of Nebraska and Kansas through the agency of Congress, their particular views of social organization on the people of the future new States, now perceiving that the policy of leaving the inhabitants of each State to judge for themselves in this respect, was ineradicably rooted in the convictions of the people of the Union, then had recourse, in the pursuit of their general object, to the extraordinary measure of propagandist colonization of the Territory of Kansas, to prevent the free and natural action of its inhabitants in its internal organization, and thus to anticipate or to force the determination of that question in this inchoate State.

With such views, associations were organized in some of the States, and their purposes were proclaimed through the press in language extremely irritating and offensive to those of whom the colonists were to become the neighbors. Those designs and acts had the necessary consequence to awaken emotions of intense indignation in States near to the Territ my of Kansas, and especially in the adjoining State of Missouri, whose domestic peace was thus the most directly endangered; but they are far from justifying the illegal and reprehensible counter-movements which ensued.

Under these inauspicious circumstancs the primary elections for members of the legislative assembly were held in most if not all, of the precincts at the time and the places, and by the persons designated and appointed by the governor according to law.

Angry accurations that illegal votes had been polled abounded on all sides. and imputations were made both of fraud and violence. But the governor, in the exercise of the power and the discharge of the duty conferred and imposed by law on him alone, officially received and considered the returns; declared a large majority of the members of the coun-il and the house of representatives "duly elected;" withheld certificates from others because of alleged illegality of votes; appointed a new election to supply the place of the persons not certified; and thus at length, in all the forms of statue, and with his own official authentication, complete legality was given to the first legislative assembly of the Territory. Those decisions of the returning of ficers and of the Governor are final, except, that, by the parliamentary usage of the country applied to the organic law, it may be conceded that each house of the assembly must have been competent to determine, in the last resort, the qualifications and the election of its members. The subject was, by its nature, one appertaining exclusively to the jurisdiction of the local authorities of the Territory. Whatever irregularities may have occurred in the elections, it seems too late now to raise that question. At all events, it is a question as to which, neither now, nor at any previous time, has the least possible legal authority been possessed by the President of the United States. For all present purposes the legislative body, thus constituted and elected was the legislative body. elected, was the legitimate assembly of the Territory.

Accordingly, the gevernor, by proclamation, convened the assembly thus

City; the two houses met and were duly organized in the ordinary parliamentary form; each sent to, and received from, the governor the official communications usual on such occasions; an elaborate message opening the session was communicated by the governor; and the general business of legislation was enacted upon by the legislative assem-But, after a few days, the assembly resolved to adjourn to another place in the Territory. A law accordingly passed, against the consent of the governor, but in due form otherwise, to remove the seat of government temporarily to the " Shawnee Manual-Labor School," (or Mission,) and thither the assembly pro-ceeded. After this, receiving a bill for the establishment of a ferry at the town of Kickapoo, the governor refused to sign it, and, by special message, as-signed for reason of refusal, not anything objectionable in the bill itself, nor any pretence of the illegality or incompet incy of the assembly as such, but only the fact that the assembly had by its act transferred the seat of government temporarily from Pawnee City to Shawnee Mission. For the same reason he continued to refuse to sign other bills, until, in the course of a few days, he, by official message, com-municated to the assembly the fact that he had received notification of the termination of his functions as governor, and that the duties of the office were legally devolved on the secretary of the Territory; thus to the last recognizing that body tive assembly. It will be perceived that, if any con-stitutional defect attached to the legislative acts of the assembly, it is not pre-tended to consist in irregularity of elec-tion, or want of qualification of the members, but only in the change of its place of session. However trivial this objection may seem to be, it requires to be considered, because upon it is founded all that superstructure of act, plainly against law, which now threatens the peace, not only of the Territory of Kanses, but of the Union .-

a sa duly-elected and constituted legisla-

Such an objection to the proceedings of the legislative assembly was of exceptionable origin, for the reason that, by the express terms of the organic law, the reat of government of the Territory was" located temporarily at Fort Leav-enworth," and yet the governor remained there less than twelve months, and of his own discretion transferred the seat of government to the Shawnee Mission, where it in fact was at the time the asembly were called to meet at Pawnes City. If the governor had any such right to change temporarily the seat of government, still more had the legislative assembly. The objection is of exceptionable origin for the further reason that the place indicated by the governor without having any exclusive claim of preference in itself, was a proposed town site only, which he and others were attempting to locate unlawfully upon land within a military reservation, and for participation in which illegal act the commandant of the post - a superior officer of the army-has been dismissed by sentence of court-martial.

Now it is easy to see why the legislative assembly might not with propriety pass the territorial act transferring its sittings to the Shawnee Mission. If it could not, that must be on account of some prohibitory or incompatible provision or act of Congress. But no such provision exists. The organic act, as already quoted, says " the seat of government is hereby located temporarily at Fort Leavenworth," and it then provides that certain of the public buildings there " may be occupied and used under the direction of the governor and the legislative assembly." These expressions might possibly be construed to imply that when in a previous section of the act it was enacted that "the first legislative assembly shall meet at such and on such a day as the governor shall appoint," the word " place" means place at Fort Leavenworth, not place any where in the Territory. If so, the governor would have been the first to err in this matter, not only in himself having removed the seat of government to the Shawnee Mission, but in again removing it to Pawnee City. If there was any de-perture from the letter of the law, therefore, it was his in both instances.

But, however this may be, it is most unreasonable to suppose that by the terms of the organic act, Congress in tended to do impliedly what it has not done expressly-that is, to forbid to the legislative assembly the power to choose any place it might see fit as the temporary seat of its deliberations. That is proved by the significant language of one of the subsequent acts of Congress on the subject, that of March 3, 1855, which in making appropriation for pub-lic buildings of the Territory, enacts that the same shall not be expended "until the legislature of said Territory shall have fixed by law the permanent seat of government." Congress, in these expressions, does not profess to be granting the power to fix the permanent seat of government, but recognises the power as one already granted. But how? Undoubtedly by the comprehensive provision of the organic act itself, which de-clares that "the legislative power of the Territory shall extend to all rightful subjects of legislation consistent with the constitution of the United States and the provisions of this act." If, in view of this act, the legislative assembly had the large power to fix the permanent seat of government at any place in its discretion, of course by the same enactment it had the less and the included power to ax it temporarily.

Nevertheless, the allegation that the acts of the legislative essembly were ilelected to meet at a place called Pawnee | legal by reason of this removal of its AND THE PARTY HARD AND THE STREET, THE TOTAL T place of session was brought forward to justify the first great movement in disregard of law within the Territory. One of the acts of the legislative assembly provided for the election of a delegate to the present Congress, and a delegate was elected under that law. But, subsequently to this, a portion of the people of the Territory proceeded without authority of law to elect another delegate.

Following upon this movement was another and more important one of the same general character. Persons confessedly not constituting the body politic, or all the inhabitants, but merely a party of the inhabitants, and without law, have undertaken to summon a convention for the purpose of transforming the Territory into a State, and have framed a constitution, adopted it, and under it elected a Governor and other officers, and a representative to Congress.

In extenuation of these illegal acts, it is alleged that the States of California, Michigan, and others, were self-organized, and, as such, were admitted into the Union without a previous enabling act of Congress. It is true that, while in a majority of cases, a previous act of Congress has been passed to authorize the Territory to present itself as a State, and that this act has not been held to be indispensable, and, in some cases, the Territory has proceeded without it, and has nevertheless been admitted into the Union as a State. It lies with Congress to authorize beforehand, or to confirm afterwards, in its discretion. But in no instance has a State been admitted upon the application of persons acting against authorities duly constituted by act of Congress. In every case it is the people of the Territory, not a party among them, who have the power to form a constitution, and ask for admission as a State. No principle of public law, no practice or precedent under the constitution of the United States, no rule of reason, right, or common sense, confers any such power as that now claimed by a mere party in the Territory. In fact, what has been done is of revolutionary character. It is avowedly so in motive and in aim as respects the local law of the Territory. It will become treasonable insurrection if it reach the length of organized resistance by force to the fundamental, or any other federal law, and to the au hority of the general government. In such an event, the path of duty for the Executive is plain. The constitution requiring him to take care that the laws of the United States be faithfully executed, if they be opposed in the Territory of Kansas he may and should place at the disposal of the marshal any public force of the United States which happens to be within the jurisdiction, to be used as a portion of the posse comitatus; and if that do not suffice to maintain order, then he may call forth the militia of one or more States for that object, or employ for the same object any part of the land or naval force of the United States. So, also, if the obstruction be to the laws of the Territory, and it be duly presented to him as a case of insurrection, he may employ for its suppression the militia of any State, or the land or naval force of the United States. And if the Territory be invaded by the citizens of other States, whether for the purpose of leciding elections or for any other, and the local authorities find themselves unable to repel or withstand it, they will be entitled to. and upon the fact being fully ascertained they shall most certainly receive the aid of the general government. But it is not the duty of the President of the United States to volunteer interposition by force to preserve the purity of elections either in a State or Territory. To do so would be subversive of public freedom. And whether a law be wise or unwise, just or unjust, is not a question for him to judge. If it be constitutional —that is, if it be the law of the land—it is his duty to cause it to be executed, or to sustain the authorities of any State or Territory in executing it in opposition to all insurrectionary movements.

Our system affords no justification of revolutionary acts; for the constitutional means of relieving people of unjust ad-ministration and laws, by a change of public agents and by repeal, are ample. and more prompt and effective than illegal violence. These constitutional means must be scrupulously guardedthis great prerogotive of popular sovereignty sacredly respected.

It is the undoubted right of the peaceable and orderly people of the Territory of Kansas to elect their own legislative body, make their own laws, and regulate their own social institutions, without foreign or domestic molestation. Interlerence on the one hand, to procure the abolition or prohibition of slave labor in the Territory, has produced mischievous interference on the other, for its maintenance or introduction. One wrong begets another. Statements entirely unfounded or exaggerated, concerning events within the Territory, are sedulously diffused through remote States to feed the flame of sectional animosity there; and the agitators there exert themselves indefatigably in return to encourage and stimulate strife within the Territory.

The inflamatory agitation, of which the present is but a part, has for twenty years produced nothing save unmitigated evil, North and South. But for it the character of the domestic institutions of the future new State would have been a matter of too little interest to the inhabitants of the contiguous States, personally or collectively, to produce among them any political emotion. Climate, soil, production, hopes of repid advancement and the pursuit of happiness on the part of the settlers themselves, with good wishes, but with no interference from without, would have quietly determined the question, which is at this time of such disgrJob Printing, of every description executed with accuracy and neatness.

But we are constrained to turn our attention to the circumstances of embarrassment as they now exist. It is the duty of the people of Kansas to discountenance every act or purpose of resistance to its laws. Above allt, he emergency appeals to the citizens of the States, an I especially of those contiguous to the territory, neither by intervention of nonresidents in elections, nor by unauthorized military force, to attempt to encroach upon or usurp the authority of the in-

No citizen of our country should permit himself to forget that he is a part of its government, and entitled to be heard in the determination of its policy and its measures, and that, therefore, the highest considerations of personal honor and patriotism require him to maintain, by whatever of power or influence he may possess, the integrity of the laws of the republic.

Entertaining these views, it will be my imperative duty to exert the whole power of the federal Executive to support public order in the Territory; to vindicate its laws, whether federal or local, against all attempts of organized resistance; and so to protect its people in the establishment of their own institutions, undisturbed by encroachment from withou;, and in the full enjoyment of the rights of self-government assured to them by the constitution and the organic act of Congress.

Although serious and threatening disturbances in the Territory of Kansas, announced to me by the governor in December last, were speedily quieted without the effusion of blood, and in a satisfactory manner, there is, I regret to say, reason to apprehend that disorders will continue to occur there, with increasing tendency to violence, until some decisive measure be taken to dispose of the question itself, which constitutes the inducement or occasion of internal agitation and of external interference.

This, it seems to me, can best be accomplished by providing that when the inhabitants of Kansas may desire it, and shall be of sufficient numbers to constitute a State, a convention of delegates, duly elected by the qualified voters, shall assemble to frame a constitution, and thus to prepare, through regular and lawful means, for its admission into the Union as a State.

I respectfully recommend the enactment of a law to that effect. I recommend, also, that a special appropriation be made to defray any exense which may become requisite in the execution of the laws or the maintenance of public order in the Territory of Kansas.

FRANKLIN PIERCE. WASHINGTON, Jan. 24, 1856.

Gov. Reeder in Reply to the Presi-

To the Editor of the N. Y. Tribune:

Str.: The Special Message of the President of the United States, communicated yesterday to Congress, assails not only myself persona'ly, but also my constituents, whom inclination as well as duty imperiously demands of me to justify and protect. Entirely satisfied as I am with the course adopted, up to this time, by the people of Kansas-convinced that it has been dictated by a desire to preserve the peace. the reputation, and the glory of our country.

-knowing that it has, at every stage, been characterized by the most conservative moderation and laudable regard for the rights of others-having seen at every step the plainest manifestation of the anxious desire to avoid even the semblance of encroachment or aggression, I should be false to every manly impulse and every sense of duty. if I allowed the aspersions of the Message to pass unnoticed. Unless the Message shall incite and simulate new invasions of our Territory and fresh outrages upon our citizens, it will produce to us no regret, as it has caused no surprise. After having seen our people trampled on, oppressed and robbed, on the one hand by the invaders of their soil, and on the other by the influence, the authority, and the influence of the present Administration; after having witnessed the cold-blooded murder of an unarmed and unoffending citizen by an officer of the Administration, who is not only unmolested by the laws and unrebuked by the President who appointed him, but who has, perhaps, strengthened his official tenant and enhanced his chances of promotion by the act; it is not at all surprising that we should, by the head of that Administration, be misrepresented and perverted. After having seen the Chief Magistrate, during five organized invasions of our Territory, unmoved by a single sympa-thy in favor of an unoffending people, innocent of all wrong, and laboring only to carry out faithfully for themselves the doctrine of self-government, and to build up and extend the greatness of our country-after having seen our invaders coming upon us armed (without reproof if not with official permission,) from the contents of the Arsena's of the United States, establishing a system of martial law over life and property, regulated only by the uncontrolled will of vindicative and irresponsible men-a system under which life was taken and property destroyed; highways obstructed; travel'ers seized, the searched and detained; all the pursuits of life paralyzed, and the destruction and extermination of whole settlements threatened and evidently intended -- backed up by the sanction and authority of the Federa officers who pledged publicly the coopera-tion of the President, and all based upon the fact that a man encouraged, perhaps aided, by his friends, had made his escapel from an arrest on a constable's peace war rant. After having thus seen our natural and legal protectors joining in the most strocious measures of oppression and wrong, it is no matter of surprise to see misrepresentation of our position and our objects ema-
